LOUISIANA GOV. SIGNS ORDER PROTECTING LGBT RIGHTS

Louisiana Gov. John Bel Edwards on Wednesday signed an executive order providing protections for state employees and employees of state contractors against discrimination based on sexual orientation, gender identity and other criteria. There is no state law protecting lesbian, gay, bisexual or transgender people from employment discrimination, the governor's office said in a statement. REUTERS

TRIAL FOR ACCUSED SC CHURCH SHOOTER DELAYED UNTIL JANUARY

2A South Carolina judge Wednesday delayed the murder trial of the accused gunman in last summer's Charleston church massacre by six months and rescheduled the proceedings for Jan. 17, 2017. Judge J.C. Nicholson told a court hearing he had been obliged to push back the trial from its planned start date in July because defense lawyers said a doctor needs two to six months to conduct psychiatric testing of 22-year-old defendant Dylann Roof. Roof is accused of opening fire June 17, 2015, during a Bible study session at Emanuel African Methodist Episcopal Church and killing nine parishioners, including pastor and state Sen. Clementa Pinckney, in a crime that shocked the nation. He is charged with nine counts of murder as well as with attempting to murder three people who survived the rampage, and he faces the death penalty. Roof waived his right to appear at Wednesday's hearing, which was attended by several relatives of the victims. EUTERS

LONG-STALLED EMAIL PRIVACY BILL ADVANCES IN CONGRESS

3Legislation that would require law enforcement to obtain a search warrant before asking technology companies to hand over dated emails unanimously moved forward in the House of Representatives on Wednesday, although its prospects for becoming law this year remain uncertain. The House Judiciary Committee voted 28-0 to approve the Email Privacy Act, which would update a decades-old law to mandate federal authorities get a warrant to access emails or other digital communications that are more than 180 days old. Currently, law enforcement and civil agencies can ask a service provider to turn over such aged private communications with only a subpoena, which is subject to less judicial oversight than a warrant. REUTERS

Verizon brings Boston a partnership and a strike within two days

Workers hit picket line over stalemate in labor talks a day after company unveils $300 million fiber-optic cable deal

SPENCER BUELL
@MetroSpencer
spencer.buell@metro.us

After Verizon announced a major deal to bring fiber optic cable to Boston, workers who install the company's home phone, TV and Internet services on Wednesday launched a strike.

The coordinated action, which was not related to the fiber-optics announcement Tuesday, comes after unions and management failed to reach an agreement on a labor contract.

About 5,000 picketers in Massachusetts joined nearly 40,000 striking workers on the East Coast in a coordinated walkout. Demonstrators wearing sandwich boards marched and chanted outside Verizon outposts in downtown Boston throughout the day, starting at 6 a.m.

"Workers and the customers who depend on us would be much better served if Verizon returned to the bargaining table and negotiated a fair agreement that fairly addressed the concerns of their workforce," the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 2222 in Dorchester, which represents the workers, said in a written statement.

Ray McConville, a Verizon spokesman, countered picketers' claims about how negotiations have gone so far.

"Their claim is that they've exhausted every option and that this was their only measure," McConville said. "If that was true, the question is, why reject our offer? We successfully reached an agreement the last go 'round."

McConville also said the company had made preparations for the strike to keep customers from seeing service interruptions.

The strike in Boston came the day after Verizon pledged to spend $300 million laying its Fios cables in the city, a move leadership in business and government have said would bring a much-needed increase in the capacity and availability of high-speed Internet. The plan calls for laying cable in Dorchester, West Roxbury and Dudley Park later this summer. The next phase will reportedly include Hyde Park, Mattapan, Jamaica Plain and other parts of Roxbury.

"The good news is: We're going to have Fios in Boston. The bad news is: We're going to be on strike," Miles Calvey, business manager for the local union, said in an interview with The Boston Globe. The Communications Workers of America (CWA) and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW) had called for a strike Monday after an impasse in contract talks.

The unions jointly represent nearly 40,000 employees in Verizon's wireline operations, which include Fios Internet, telephone and TV services.

"Verizon has forced us there. ... Nobody wants to go on strike," CWA President Chris Shelton said. "It's a hardship for our members and our families, it's a hardship for customers."

Verizon and the unions, which represent Verizon workers from states such as Massachusetts, Virginia, New York and Rhode Island, have been in talks over the company's plans to cut health-care and pension-related benefits over a three-year period since June. Wireline workers have been working without a contract since the last agreement expired in August.

McConville, the Verizon spokesman, said New York had the highest number of workers on strike, about 13,900 employees. Pennsylvania was next, with 4,600, followed by Massachusetts with 4,400.

Reuters, Jenny DeHuff and Chris Caesar contributed to this report

"The good news is: We're going to have Fios in Boston. The bad news is: We're going to be on strike."

SINGLE-GENDER CLUBS

Harvard University's Porcellian Club breaks silence to speak against admitting women

An all-male Harvard social club has issued its first statement in years to defend its position against admitting women as the university pushes for fewer single-gender organizations.

Charles M. Storey, graduate board president of the 225-year-old Porcellian Club, said in a statement emailed to Harvard's Crimson newspaper that university pressure to allow female members goes against the goal of less on-campus sexual assault.

"Given our policies, we are mystified as to why the current administration feels that forcing our club to accept female members would reduce the incidence of sexual assault on campus," Storey told the Crimson. "Forcing single-gender organizations to accept members of the opposite sex could potentially increase, not decrease, the potential for sexual misconduct."

Those comments were reported a day before such social clubs were set to meet with Dean of the College Rakesh Khurana as the school aims to have more organizations admit both genders to their ranks, the Washington Post reported.

"The college has for many months made it clear that the behaviors and attitudes espoused by unrecognized single-gender social organizations at Harvard College remain at odds with the aspirations of the 21st century society to which the college hopes and expects our students will contribute," a statement from Khurana was quoted by the Crimson.

Last semester, at least two Harvard clubs added female members, and Khurana has said that, with regard to the remaining single-gender organizations, "there is nothing off the table," according to the Crimson.

Storey suggested that, should the club and the administration not arrive at a consensus, a legal challenge could be considered, according to the Washington Post.

State trooper probed after driver goes wrong way

Motorist who recorded the video has told Fox25 that he might be investigated for having recorded the incident.

A video showing a driver heading the wrong way in Nahant has led to an investigation into why a state trooper did not stop the errant driver.

State police said to Fox25 that an internal investigation has been launched to learn why that trooper, who was behind the car, did not pull over the motorist for traveling down the wrong side of the 2-mile Nahant Causeway.

"We will conduct an investigation to determine if criminal or civil traffic charges are warranted against the wrong-way operator." Massachusetts State Police spokesperson David Procopio was quoted by WCVB. "Second, we will review the trooper's response during the incident."

The driver, headed north in the southbound lanes, eventually got onto the correct side and was then reportedly followed by the state trooper for half a mile, but that trooper apparently did nothing to stop the motorist, WCVB added.

"I mean, you did something wrong, you should probably be pulled over for it," one person told Fox25. The driver who recorded the video has said to Fox25 that he might be investigated for having recorded the incident.

Equal pay for women in state's spotlight

Find out how much less women earn than men with treasurer's "Wage Gap Calculator."

SPENCER BUELL
@MetroSpencer
spencer.buell@metro.us

State officials have been shining a light on pay equity for women this week — reminding Boston that it is not alone in paying female employees less than their male peers.

Data on a new website dedicated to the issue indicate that women in Massachusetts make 82 cents on the dollar compared with men. For African-American can women that figure is 61 cents and for Latinas it's 50 cents, according to EqualPayMA.com.

To offer a sense of how different workers in the state are affected by the disparity, state Treasurer Deb Goldberg this week launched a tool called the "Wage Gap Calculator."

"Wage equality is not solely a women's issue — it's a family issue and affects the economic health and well-being of our entire state," Goldberg said in a Tuesday statement. "When women are paid as much as men for equal work, we all benefit. Our hope is that the launch of www.EqualPayMA.com will empower more people to take part in ending the gender wage gap."

"I got a sneak peek at the wage-gap calculator and I was pretty horrified by what I learned," Attorney General Maura Healey said Tuesday, according to the State House News Service. "But it is such a neat and nifty tool and a real terrific way to raise consciousness and awareness."

Equal Pay Day was April 12. The occasion marks how late into the year women need to work to earn as much as men earned in the previous year, according to the National Committee on Pay Equity.

the Institute for Women's Policy Research, which also estimated the state, with its current policies, would not be able to close that gap until 2058.

Efforts from Mayor Marty Walsh's administration to narrow the pay gap between men and women have included city-sponsored salary-negotiation workshops. In March, he said more than 100 companies had signed a pledge to address the issue and share data with the city.

"By working together — government with business, individuals and legislators — I am confident we will finally pay women what they deserve, and as a result we will strengthen our economy, our families, and our city," he wrote in an op-ed in the Boston Business Journal. "It's about time!"

State lawmakers have been considering a bill aimed at addressing the issue by forcing companies to let employees discuss salary with one another and inform workers of their rights via public postings, while also increasing fines for violations of pay equity laws. It cleared the Senate in January.

How the Wage Gap Calculator works

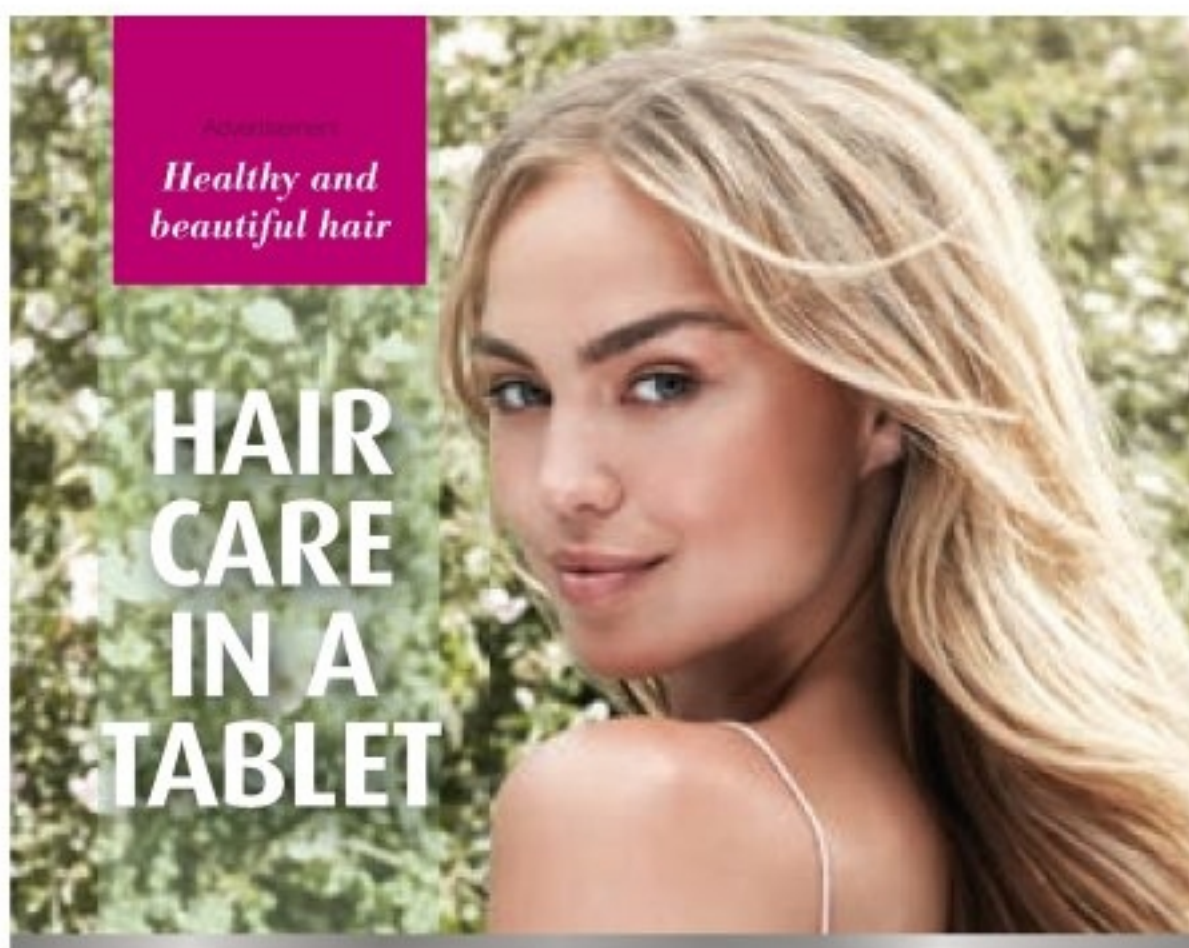

Users can plug in their age and industry, then find out how much less women in that field make than men.

$34: $42

A 35-year-old woman working in architecture and engineering earns an average of $34 to a man's $42, a gap of $16,000 a year — or the equivalent of 181 months of rent over 30 years.

$13: $17

A similar woman working in transportation would earn $13 to a man's $17, according to the calculator.

Judge orders 'affluenza' teen to spend about two years in jail

Ethan Couch has been in a Tarrant County jail since January. In his first appearance in adult court, he was given the sentence of almost two years in jail, the maximum allowable probation conditions for the case in the adult system.

A Texas county judge sentenced Ethan Couch, the "affluenza" teen, on Wednesday to serve four consecutive 180-day terms in jail after he killed four people outside Fort Worth with his pickup truck while driving drunk in 2013.

"You are not getting out of jail today," Judge Wayne Salvant told Couch, who was wearing a red jumpsuit from the Tarrant County Jail. Salvant said he will hold another hearing in two weeks to consider the sentence he imposed.

At his trial in juvenile court in 2013 when he was 16, a psychologist testifying on his behalf said Couch was so spoiled by his wealthy parents that he could not tell right from wrong. The psychologist described the affliction as "affluenza," a term that quickly became a media buzzword.

He was sentenced to 10 years of probation, a penalty that sparked outrage from critics who ridiculed the affluenza defense and said his family's wealth helped the teen avoid jail.

Tarrant County Sheriff Dee Anderson said Couch's demeanor has changed since being in jail from being quite cocky at first to rather compliant.

The change is due to

Ethan Couch JALISCO STATE PROSECUTOR'S OFFICE

the "stark reality he is dealing with today," Anderson told reporters at court, adding Couch will remain in solitary confinement for his own protection.

Couch was taken into custody in Texas after he fled to Mexico in December with his mother, apparently to avoid arrest for violating the drink-and-drug-free terms of the probation deal after video on social media appeared to show him at a party where alcohol was being consumed.

Judge Salvant is also presiding over the case of his mother, Tonya Couch.

She is charged with helping her son flee to Mexico. She was released on bail but is under home confinement awaiting trial. REUTERS

Almost 400,000 disabled Americans eligible for student loan forgiveness

The U.S. government announced plans on Tuesday to forgive $7.7 billion in student loans for about 387,000 permanently disabled borrowers.

While permanently disabled Americans are already permitted student loan forgiveness under the Higher Education Act, many who are eligible have not taken advantage of the debt relief, the Department of Education said in a statement.

Of the 387,000 borrowers identified by the department as eligible but have not taken part in the program, about 179,000 of them are in default, potentially causing them to lose their federal tax refunds and Social Security benefits, the government said.

"Too many eligible borrowers were falling through the cracks, unaware they were eligible for relief," Education Undersecretary Ted Mitchell said in a statement. "We need to make it easier, not harder, for them to receive the benefits they are due."

The Education Department has partnered with the Social Security Administration to identify these borrowers.

Beginning Friday, borrowers who were identified in the first round will receive a letter explaining their eligibility for loan forgiveness and what steps they need to take to receive a discharge.

The letters will be distributed over four months. A follow-up letter will be sent 120 days after the first letter if the department does not receive a signed application. REUTERS

BRIEF

Man sentenced to four years for kidnapping son from mother

An Ohio man was sentenced Wednesday to four years in prison for taking his 5-year-old son from his mother's house in Alabama in 2002 and living with him under false identities for 13 years.

Bobby Hernandez, 53, was also given five years' probation by Cuyahoga County Judge Cassandra Collier-Williams. He had faced up to 54 years in prison.

Hernandez made a few brief statements in court, including apologies to his son and former girlfriend, before becoming overwhelmed by emotion. "Julian was always the most important thing to me," he said.

In March, he pleaded guilty to 15 charges: two counts of felony kidnapping, 10 of tampering with records, two of interference with custody and one of forgery. Seventeen other charges were dropped as part of a plea agreement.

Hernandez was arrested in November 2015 after the FBI received a tip that he and his son were living in Cleveland. REUTERS

RACE FOR THE WHITE HOUSE

In line early for Bernie rally

New Yorkers began waiting in line at noon Wednesday for a Bernie Sanders rally at 8 p.m. in Washington Square Park. BILLY BECERRA, METRO

Clinton to propose creation of immigrant affairs office

Democratic front-runner Hillary Clinton on Wednesday said she will propose the creation of a national Office of Immigrant Affairs should she win the White House in November, as she seeks to woo minority and immigrant voters in New York less than a week before the state's primary.

The office would coordinate policies and programs among federal agencies and with state and local governments, Clinton said at an event in New York City where she met with immigrant-rights activists.

"It's an issue that cuts across all levels of government," she said. She added that it would expand the efforts of President Barack Obama's Task Force on New Americans, which was created in 2014 to help immigrants and refugees integrate better into the United States.

In contrast, Republican candidates have largely proposed tougher immigration rules. Republican front-runner Donald Trump has called for building a wall along the border with Mexico and a temporary ban on Muslims entering the country.

Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton GETTY IMAGES

The New York primary Tuesday could either help former Secretary of State Clinton bolster her status as the Democratic front-runner or hand a significant victory to rival Bernie Sanders, the Vermont senator seeking to defy expectations and win the party's nomination for the Nov. 8 election.

Both candidates are campaigning across the state, looking to win over New York's diverse population, including voters from immigrant families. Around 19 percent of the state's population is Hispanic or Latino, according to the U.S. Census.

With 247 pledged delegates at stake, the state is among the most significant nominating contests left on the calendar before the Democrats' July 25-28 convention in Philadelphia.

Clinton holds a double-digit lead in opinion polls over Sanders in New York, the state where he was born and which she served for eight years as a U.S. senator. She also holds a commanding lead in pledged delegates overall, leaving Sanders only a narrow path if he is to win the nomination out from under her, a task some pundits say is already beyond him.

A Democratic candidate needs 2,383 delegates to clinch the nomination. Those can come from any combination of pledged delegates won in primaries and caucuses, as well as so-called superdelegates, who can vote as they choose. REUTERS

Stop telling Ruby Rose she made you gay

Ruby Rose — breakout star of “Orange Is the New Black” and not to be confused with Chris Tucker’s character from “The Fifth Element” — has a simple message for all the women out there who are fans of a particular brand of hyperbole in complimenting her on her looks. “When people say to me that I turned them gay, I just laugh, because that’s not really even a possibility. It sounds like I did something against their will in the middle of the night, as if I crept into their brain and pushed the gay button, then did an evil laugh and left them to fend for themselves — newly gay and alone in the world,” she tells Galore magazine. “People will say to J. Law, ‘I want to be your best friend,’ or to T. Swift, ‘I want to be in your squad.’ Everyone has got their little thing, and the catch phrase I got after ‘Orange’ was, ‘She turned me gay.’ It’s a heck of a responsibility, honestly, but here’s the most important part: Rose just flat-out doesn’t believe you. “I break it down like this: Did I find Channing Tatum in ‘Magic Mike’ to be extremely hot? Yes! Could I now turn straight for him without having previously ever had a desire to be with a man? The answer is, nope.”

Megan Fox knows who didn't knock her up

It's unclear what the state of pregnant Megan Fox's relationship with Brian Austin Green is these days, what with that divorce filing eight months ago and all, which has led to a fair amount of speculation online about the exact paternity of her third child. And it's speculation that Fox herself has seen — and thinks is hilarious. While she won't put it all to rest with an official confirmation, she is willing at least to rule a few suspects out — all of whom, coincidentally, happen to be men she's worked with. Fox posted a photo lineup of Shia LaBeouf, Will Arnett and Jake Johnson with the caption, “#NotTheFather,” which is awfully helpful of her. I'm sure LaBeouf is relieved, at least. But hey, you know who wasn't included in that collage? Green himself. Curious, no?

Lindsay Lohan probably not engaged (unless she is)

Less than a month after revealing that she has a new boyfriend, Lindsay Lohan is reportedly set to tie the knot. The perennially troubled starlet is said to be engaged to Russian business heir Egor Tarabasov, according to Entertainment Tonight. Maybe it's time to stop being so cynical and believe people can change. Stranger things have happened.

Eddie Redmayne does his magic in the trailer for "Fantastic Beasts and Where to Find Them." WARNER BROS. PICTURES

Nerding out over 'Fantastic Beasts'

Last weekend, we got a new trailer for the "Harry Potter" prequel (sort of), "Fantastic Beasts and Where to Find Them." I was at a convention and my schedule was packed to the gills, but after I watched (with my sister Christina, who is as big a "Harry Potter" fan as I am), it was all we could talk about. If you're not familiar with the new film, this is the story of Newt Scamander (Eddie Redmayne), a wizard from Hogwarts back in the 1920s, who goes to New York on an adventure. It's based on J.K. Rowling's book with the same title about magical creatures, which is credited to Scamander.

"Fantastic Beasts" doesn't really have a narrative, so we have no idea what the plot of the story will be. However, just hearing the first strains of the so-familiar score put me right back into the big armchair where I read the very first book. It made me remember that back then I was too old to get an owl asking me to go to Hogwarts, but that I was pulled in anyway. I've written before about fandom, my happiness with the continued expanded universe and Rowling's refusal to leave us hanging. But this trailer awakened the "Harry Potter" love again, and I suspect that I'm not the only one.

The trailer gives us a few clues about what we're going to see. First, it appears that Dumbledore (oh, how I miss him) is an ally of Scamander's, but the poor boy was kicked out of Hogwarts for doing something dangerous with a magical creature that put everyone's lives in danger.

There is something about this fandom that really grabs people. Heck, I just got re-sorted from Gryffindor into Ravenclaw, and it actually really threw me for a loop for a bit! (For the record, I'm very proud to be a Ravenclaw!) Is your Hogwarts house part of your identity?

So tell me, Harry Potter fans: Are you as committed to this as I am? Are you excited to go back into this world? Have you been re-sorted, and how did it feel? Remind me that I'm not the only one who says "accio Diet Coke" when I'm thirsty.

Steven Soderbergh is picky about TV

The Oscar-winning director talks about bringing "The Girlfriend Experience" to TV.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

GETTY IMAGES

Steven Soderbergh didn't write or direct "The Girlfriend Experience," despite it being a TV show spin-off (of sorts) of his 2009 film of the same name. He's just a producer. He ceded most of the control to Amy Seimetz and Lodge Kerrigan — two filmmakers who found themselves given the freedom to write and direct 13 half-hour episodes. The show once again revolves around a high-end escort, in this case a young law student played in a breakthrough turn by Riley Keough — seen in "Mad Max: Fury Road" and Soderbergh's own "Magic Mike," and also the granddaughter of Elvis Presley.

On his roll as producer:

"I'm just there to facilitate stuff. I don't really like producing, actually. I'm always hopeful they won't need me a lot," Soderbergh says. "For Season 2, I'm really putting into play a framework to have Lodge and Amy have even more control. I don't want to be the parent. I want them to be their own parent. Other than getting it basically going, I said, 'You should meet Riley.' I didn't say, 'You should cast her.' Those were my big contributions."

Why he was all about Riley Keough:

"I worked with her for three days on 'Magic Mike.' I just had a very strong sense that I was barely scratching the surface of what she had. I really felt she was a thoroughbred and I did the equivalent of putting a kid on her back and walking her around in a circle, instead of really letting her go," Soderbergh explains. "It's rare — it shouldn't be rare, but it kind of is — that you have a performer who, when you're rolling, isn't protecting their idea of who they are personally and what people will think of them. It's what you want as a director. For somebody that young, and especially someone who's grown up around the business, to be that unself-conscious and fearless is unusual."

Can he find that kind of freedom in movies anymore?

"No. It depends. Sure. In isolated circumstances," he says. Movies are getting away from the kind of specificity he wants, he explains. "In fact they're scared of that, and will only agree to that under duress or if you're a filmmaker and you do something very specific and unusual, and you've got Leo [DiCaprio] or whoever to make everybody feel it has a chance. There's at least one studio in town who's known within the industry to not hire auteurs. They're not in that business."

Being a snob

He admits he's a huge fan of "Better Call Saul" and "Mr. Robot." But he's also picky. "There's still only a handful of people who can make great shows, and they're busy," he says. "Look, I'm a f—ing snob. If I'm watching a show and I don't like the font, I stop. I don't have enough time to watch. If you do anything wrong, I'm out. When I see something really good it just proves my point, which is there aren't that many people who can do that."

Instagram IRL books coming out this month

Sometimes all it takes is a hilarious meme popping up in your feed to transform your day. This month, the hilarity is going next level with three books based on popular Instagram accounts, and they are just as funny in print as they are online.

"I Had a Nice Time and Other Lies ..."

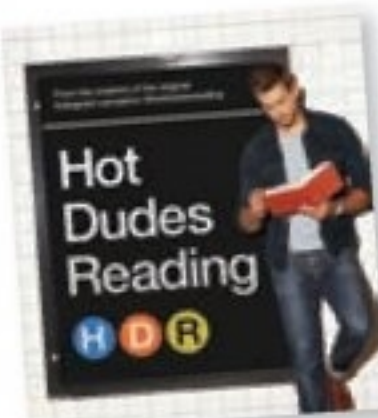

by @Betches (out April 19)
There's a reason the anonymous writers behind @Betches have racked up 3.9 million followers. Their memes are everything you want to say but don't — especially when it comes to being a single 20-something. "I Had a Nice Time and Other Lies ..." is a dating guide that tackles every stage of a relationship, from getting over your ex to "locking that s---t down." The Betches tell it like it is, which would be harsh if it wasn't so damn funny.

"Hot Dudes Reading"

by @HotDudesReading (out April 26)

Between the covers of this book are lots and lots of hot guys doing something that melts the hearts of book lovers everywhere: reading — and not on a Kindle. The anonymous New Yorker behind @HotDudesReading snaps the candid pics, then adds hilariously witty captions. The book is broken down by subway line and features interviews with some of the hotties who got Insta'ed.

"Mother, Can You Not?"

by Kate Siegel aka @CrazyJew-ishMom (out now)

Do you ever get a text from your 'rents so ridiculous that you can't resist screenshotting it and sharing it with your friends? Well, New Yorker Kate Siegel took that idea and ran with it, creating a whole Instagram feed of texts from her mom. An example: "You know what would be cool? A grandchild." In her new book, Siegel tells some of her most embarrassing, yet somehow endearing, stories from childhood, like how her mom was so excited when Siegel got her first period that she basically told everyone. Yep, it happened.

WHERE TO EAT, DRINK & PLAY

Where to carbo-load before the Boston Marathon

Runners — get your forks ready.

LINDA CLARKE
letters@metro.us

Need options for where to carb-up in readiness ahead of Marathon Monday, or where to replenish your depleted glycogen, après race? We've got the low-down on the city's deals on bottomless pastas and delicious comfort food. And even if you're not running, no one's stopping you from indulging, too.

In east Cambridge, the annual bottomless pasta marathon menu returns to Restaurant Dante in the Royal Sonesta Hotel. On Sunday, otherwise known as Marathon Eve, Dante's annual Carb It Up Bottomless Pasta Marathon includes house-made pastas like chitarra alla Genovese with a classic pesto sauce; tufoli al sugo di pomodoro, with tomato and basil; spicy aglio e olio spaghetti with pine nuts and raisins; or strozzapreti con le zucchini — a thick spaghetti type pasta with zucchini and Pecorino cheese. Go with these vegetable and cheese preparations or add meatballs, grilled chicken breast or grilled arctic char to amp up the protein. (Pastas $16-$24; meat sides $9, fish $12. Sunday, 40 Edwin H Land Blvd., Cambridge. 617-497-4200. www.restaurant-dante.com.)

SRV, the Venetian-inspired restaurant in the South End, mills its flour in-house for all grain-based dishes, including pastas, like the one pictured above. (Freshly ground grains retain more nutrition.) SRV's special marathon weekend "Arsenale" tasting menu includes a selection of cicchetti (Venetian tapas or small bites) and four dishes of pasta: tajarin with asparagus, truffle and butter; gnudi with morels and pecorino; maltagliati with foraged mushrooms, leeks and Parmesan; bigoli with a duck ragu and soffritto; or a spring radish salad with asiago. ($50. Friday through Sunday, dinner only. 569 Columbus Ave., Boston 617-536-9500. www.srvboston.com.)

For a casual fuel stop, Anthem Kitchen + Bar in Faneuil Hall has a Sunday and Monday marathon special that's a steal: a bottomless bowl of orecchiette pasta with roasted vegetables in a light tomato-cream sauce. It's available for lunch and dinner on both days. ($16. Sunday and Monday, 617-720-5570. 101 South Market Building, Boston. www.anthem-boston.com.)

On Monday, runners who bring their 2016 Boston Marathon medal to Serafina Boston, postrace, can enjoy an unlimited serving of any homemade pasta of their choice, including hearty Bolognese, homemade black truffle taglioni, and lobster ravioli. While you're at it, try the fluffy ricotta cheesecake slathered in berries, or that traditional Italian pick-me-up, a slice of creamy tiramisu. You've earned it. (Pastas: $26.20. Desserts: $8-$10. Monday, 10 High St., Boston. 617-426-1234. www.Serafina-Boston.com.)

The Wicked Witch of the West is the true star of "The Wizard of Oz." She even inspired her own musical backstory spin-off with a lifetime supply of killer catchphrases, synonymous with her shrill cackle and green skin. So how intimidating is it to recreate a legendary character for stage?

Shani Hadjian takes on the role as the Wicked Witch/Miss Gulch in the national tour of Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice's "The Wizard of Oz," coming to the Citi Wang Theatre next week. The Ohio native previously starred in the national tour of "The Beauty and the Beast" and "Fancy Nancy" and knew she was stepping into a role that would be known wide and well. She chats with us just before the production arrives in Boston about taking on this iconic role, the Wicked Witch as a feminist and why it's not so easy being green.

A "Wicked" remix

Before the production kicked into high gear, Hadjian hadn't seen the film since she was a teenager. "I later watched it during tech rehearsals," she says. "I read the books but I didn't want to watch the movie before. I didn't want [my role] to end up being too similar because I remembered it too well. I wore out that VHS as a child, though."

While the stage production differs from the 1939 motion picture starring Judy Garland, elements of the original are still expected by adoring audiences. This new show includes many of those callbacks alongside new music from Webber and Rice, but Hadjian says the cast was still able to make the show their own.

"This type of production is timeless and [the fact] that everyone knows that is both challenging and amazing," she explains. "It's live theater versus a movie so that's naturally different, but we play homage to the production that everyone knows while making it ours. There's no way I can be Margaret Hamilton, but our creatives were very encouraging about us being our own versions as long as we were being truthful to the characters."

Wicked Witch as a role model?

While "Wicked" maybe made some fans into sympathizers, Hadjian assures us that while she's familiar with the modern reveal of her character's sob story, she's still the bad guy.

"I know that everyone loves the 'Wicked' story and I hope it's helped people see that side of the story, but I'm still definitely the villain in this [production]," she explains. But that's a good thing: "I take her passion and drive and think, 'Oh, OK, she wants to prove herself because she wants to be the best, because she was told she wasn't the best, and she wants to be powerful, and she is truly powerful.'"

So a strong, powerful, ambitious female ... role model? Is the Wicked Witch a possible feminist icon? "Eh, I think it depends, but her feelings toward Dorothy, I don't know, maybe that's a little in the opposite direction," Hadjian laughs.

On going green

Set and costume designer Robert Jones, who was also on the London and Toronto tour creative team, developed the intricate feathered creation that Hadjian wears throughout the show. "I feel so strong and beautiful when I'm in costume," she says. "They're so powerful and stunning and I'm covered in real rooster feathers head to toe."

Hadjian also goes green for the production, wearing makeup to replicate her character's synonymous skin tone for each and every show. "My ears and hairline are always green and my pores are always somewhat green. I try to scrub and exfoliate as much as I can. It's hard on my skin, but 100 percent worth it."

Some of America's best festivals are held off the beaten path.

You may not know them, but some of the country's best festivals are held in small towns scattered throughout the U.S. Featuring a wide range of themes, these celebrations often include parades, entertainment, food and plenty of special events. Make an effort to time a vacation during one of these beloved fests. Music festivals, film festivals, flower festivals, food festivals and more make the list of America's 15 best small-town events.

Mackinac Island, Michigan
This 10-day fest is held every June to draw visitors to Mackinac Island when the lilacs are in full bloom. Dating back to 1949, the lilac-themed celebration has grown throughout the years, but key traditions, such as crowning a Lilac Queen, have remained the same. During the festival, visitors can also enjoy concerts in the park, the lilac walk and talks, dancing, tours and the beautiful flowering trees — some more than 150 years old. Horse-drawn floats make up the festival's finale, the Grand Parade, which has been recognized by the Library of Congress as a "local legacy" event.

Telluride, Colorado
The Telluride Film Festival, which began in 1979, has always maintained the element of surprise. Unlike most other film fests, at Telluride nobody knows which movies are showing, which celebrities are attending or who is being honored. This state of anticipation helps build excitement for the annual event, where "Brokeback Mountain," "Juno" and "Up in the Air" have all been shown. The festival includes premieres, Q&A sessions and plenty of special guests, ranging from Reese Witherspoon to Brad Pitt to Jon Stewart. More than 3,000 people attend the event, which is held during Labor Day weekend.

Gulf Shores, Alabama
With more than 250 vendors, musical entertainment, an outdoor village and, of course, plenty of shrimp, it's no surprise that more than 250,000 people attend this free beach festival in October every year. The national celebration started in 1971 as a way to draw visitors to Gulf Shores beaches after Labor Day and has established itself as an Alabama mainstay. And there's plenty of shrimp-themed fun to be had: Chefs compete to win the annual restaurant challenge with their best shrimp dishes, with more than 200 pounds of shrimp being prepared every day for sampling.

A large crowd of people is gathered on a grassy field, sitting on blankets or the ground, facing a small stage area. The stage features a white backdrop with a red banner. In the background, a large, steep hill covered in dense green forest rises under a clear blue sky. The scene depicts a large-scale outdoor event, likely a festival or concert, held in a natural setting.

Telluride Film Festival GETTY IMAGES

St. Charles, Illinois
For more than 25 years, St. Charles has hosted this beloved Scarecrow Fest. Each year, attendees choose from more than 150 entries to crown the winner of the Scarecrow Contest, which breaks down into six categories. Entering its 30th year this October, the weekend-long festival includes two stages of live entertainment, make-your-own scarecrow stations, a carnival and the Autumn on the Fox Arts & Craft Show. Admission, parking and trolleys are all free during the St. Charles festival, which is located just an hour west of Chicago along the Fox River.

Lexington, North Carolina
Held along nine blocks of Uptown Lexington's Main Street, this annual Barbecue Festival drew an estimated 200,000 people in 2014. Since its start in 1984, the festival has celebrated Lexington, the self-proclaimed Barbecue Capital of the World, and its famous slow-cooked and smoky pork shoulders dipped in a vinegar mixture. The fest is made up of more than 400 exhibitors (selling crafts and food) and a number of special activities — visitors have enjoyed a bicycle stunt show, rock climbing wall and an antique car show.

The festival is typically held during one of the last two weekends of October.

Bangor, Maine
Held along the waterfront, the American Folk Festival draws more than 90,000 visitors each year. The three-day festival incorporates music and dance performances from a variety of different regions, cultures and heritages. Along with craft demonstrations, a children's area, food vendors and a marketplace with handmade creations, the festival also has workshops, where artists who share a similar instrument or tradition take the stage together to perform and discuss their music.

ORTIZ FAREWELL TOUR ALREADY INSUFFERABLE, MORE TO COME

Matt Burke is the National Sports Editor and a columnist at Metro US.

Follow him on Twitter
@burke_metro

We should have seen this coming, this perfect storm of Big Papi farewell overexposure.

In the past 30 days we've already had "David Ortiz 500 necklace night," he got a street named after him in Florida, his daughter sang the national anthem, he threw out the first pitch (how often do active players throw out a first pitch?) and he received several standing ovations in Montreal — that hotbed of Ortiz history.

Mark your calendars, folks, because there's more fun to come! On Tuesday, May 24, at Fenway, it'll be "David Ortiz Canvas Print Night!" (NO. JOKE.) The first 15,000 fans in attendance will receive an exclusive canvas print of Ortiz, "commemorating his remarkable and historic Red Sox career." On Tuesday, June 21, it'll be "Papi Gnome Night!" (NO. JOKE.) The first 15,000 fans in attendance will receive a "Big Papi Gnome!" On Tuesday, July 26 it'll be "Build-A-Papi Night!" (NO. JOKE.) It's just like build a bear, only it's that big, soft Teddy Bear, Papi! Get it!?

And then, on Sunday, Oct. 2, comes the grand finale. Papi's final home game. He will descend into Fenway from the top of the Pru on a zipline, where he will be met in the infield by Manny Ramirez, Kevin Millar, Pedro, Derek Jeter, Mariano Rivera, Michael Jordan, President Obama, Vladimir Putin and the family of the late Nelson de la Rosa. The Fenway organ will play "To God Be the Glory."

None of this stuff should surprise us, of course. The Yankees started this obnoxious, season-long farewell trend with Mariano Rivera and then Derek Jeter. The Lakers just wrapped up their six-month-long slurp-fest with Kobe Bryant.

Surprise, surprise — none of those teams were even close to winning championships in those seasons that were overshadowed by the retiree.

It's ridiculously early, but the Red Sox look like they're headed toward another failure of a season and it's entirely possible that Ortiz will be the only draw in the dog days of summer and early fall. So this stuff will become even more insufferable, if that's possible.

Then there's the fact that the Red Sox simply live for this stuff and feel the need to try and "out-do" every other team in sports when it comes to pre-game and in-game ceremonies. While Ortiz might not even crack the top 10 list of best Red Sox players ever, he will be hailed as the "G.O.A.T." for the rest of this season.

You truly have to feel bad for the Fenway public address guy who has to read these 10-minute speeches on the beauty of the game and the beauty of the Ortiz. He's forced to make rainy Monday games in April sound Shakespearean.

"Ladies and gentlemen, this afternoon, prior to the start of the ballgame against the Colorado Rockies, our beloved Big Papi took what could be his final piss in the urinal adjacent to Gate D. We thank Papi for his contributions to that particular urinal over all these glorious years. No one takes a pee like you, Papi."

Sandoval placed on 15-day DL

Red Sox third baseman Pablo Sandoval was placed on the 15-day disabled list Wednesday. Sandoval is said to have suffered a left shoulder strain and the Red Sox said that the injury may have occurred in batting practice. Sandoval lost his starting job at third base to Travis Shaw in spring training.

"I still firmly believe that Panda is going to be a contributor to this team," said Sox manager John Farrell. GETTY IMAGES

ADVICE FOR IMPATIENT OWNERS

Kyle Bishop is a lead MLB columnist at Rotoballer.com, your secret weapon for winning fantasy leagues.

Patience is an oft-forgotten virtue in the opening weeks of the fantasy baseball season. It's all too human to overreact to extreme performances in the early going, even if the outcome is frequently suboptimal. Nonetheless, whether due to inexperience or simply an itchy trigger finger, some owners are going to feel the need to tinker. If you're one of them, here are a few lightly-owned players who might be worth a spot on your roster. We'll use Yahoo for ownership figures and position eligibility — as they say, your mileage may vary.

Brandon Finnegan

Finnegan flirted with a no-hitter on Monday and has 14 strikeouts through his first two starts (12 2/3 innings). There was some uncertainty over whether he'd be only that, he's added some velocity to the slider.

Chris Carter

(18 percent)

At this point, we know who Carter is — he'll hit homers, strike out a ton, and run hot and cold all season. Despite his flaws, Carter was a useful piece in the two seasons prior to last year's rough showing, averaging 33 HRs and 85 RBIs. He's gone deep three times already in his first seven games, and the Brewers are A) not contending and B) have literally no one else to play first base. If you're in need of cheap pop and can stomach a batting average around the Mendoza Line, Carter is as good of a pickup as anybody.

Jayson Werth

(17 percent)

Werth has averaged just 111 games per season since 2012 due to a variety of injuries. 2015 was the worst season of his career, and the end is nigh for the 13-year veteran, who will turn 37 next month. That said, Werth was pretty awesome in the two seasons prior to 2015, hitting .304/.396/.491 with 41 homers, 19 steals and 333 R+RBI in 276 games. Even last year, he maintained his typically excellent plate discipline and batted ball profile. The driving force behind his struggles last season, besides the usual injury issues, was a .253 BABIP, 72 points below his career rate. This was only the second time he'd ever posted a mark below .300, and the underlying numbers simply didn't support it.

Adam Conley

(7 percent)

Conley's first start of 2016 didn't go as he might've hoped — he gave up three runs in the first inning and didn't return after a lengthy rain delay. However, he showed a huge velocity increase over last season, adding nearly three mph to each of his offerings. One inning is about as infinitesimal of a sample size as can be, but that kind of jump is intriguing. If Conley can sustain it, expect his microscopic ownership rate to follow a similar trajectory.

TO WIT:

A certain condominium unit, situated in the City of Boston, County of Suffolk, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, known as Unit No. 1505 of the One Charles Condominium, a condominium established by Master Deed of One Charles Condominium, dated as of October 29, 2004, recorded with the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds at Book 35785, Page 296, as amended at Book 37676, Page 70, as may be further amended, and the By-Laws of One Charles Condominium Association, dated as of October 29, 2004 recorded with said Deeds at Book 35786, Page 1.

Unit No. 1505 is conveyed together with a 0.3350 percent interest in the General Common Elements and a 0.3430 percent interest in the Residential Limited Common Elements and its appurtenant interests as more particularly described in the Master Deed and By-Laws. Also conveyed is the right to have automobile parked in the parking garage in the building, as more particularly described in the Master Deed.

The condominium created by the Master Deed is a mixed used condominium consisting of 231 residential units and 3 commercial units. the Unit is shown on the Plans of the Condominium recorded simultaneously as part of the Master Deed and the unit floor plan is to be recorded herewith. A verified statement of a registered architect in the form required by the Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 183A, Sections 8 and 9, is affixed to the Plans and the unit floor plan.

The post office address of the Unit is: Unit #1505 One Charles Condominium, One Charles Street South, Boston, Massachusetts 02116

Subject to the fact that this Deed, the Unit and the Condominium are subject to the provisions of Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 183A. Capitalized terms not defined herein, shall have the meanings ascribed to them in the Master Deed.

Subject to and with the benefit of the following, which are recorded with the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds:

1. The provisions of the Master Deed, the Plans, the By-Laws and the Rules and Regulations adopted by One Charles Condominium Association and recorded as Schedule 1 to the By-Laws, as the same may be amended from time to time, which provisions, together with any amendments thereto, shall constitute the covenants running with the land and shall bind any person having, at any time, any interest in the unit, his or her family, invitees, servants, visitors, tenants and occupants, as though such provisions were recited and stipulated at length herein.

2. The easements and all other matters appearing of record at said registry.

The unit is intended to be used solely for residential purposes, subject to the restrictions and provisions of the Master Deed. Without limiting the foregoing, the unit is subject to the restrictions set forth in Section 7 of the Master Deed, as follows:

A. Generally. The Residential Units are intended only for residential purposes by members of a single housekeeping unit and their domestic employees and temporary nonpaying guests, provided, however, that any of the Residential Units, may also be used as an office:

I. Only if such office is accessory to such residential use of such Residential Unit.

II. Only if and to the extent such accessory office use is permitted by applicable Legal Requirements.

III. Only if no one shall be employed in such office, except the residents of such Residential Unit.

No clients or business invitees shall be permitted to visit such office and there shall be no signs allowed in connection with such office use. No portion of the Common Elements may be used by the Residential Unit Owners for the conduct of any commercial business. The parking rights appurtenant to a Residential Unit, if any, may only be used to park automobiles registered with the applicable registry of motor vehicles belonging to the Unit Owner owning the Residential Unit, to which such parking rights are appurtenant and by any tenant of such Residential Unit. Such parking rights are not transferable, except upon a transfer to the Declarant or upon the sale, lease, transfer or other conveyance of a Residential Unit, as more particularly described in Article 12 of the By-Laws.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, no unit may be used for the following: flea market, swap show or 'outlet store' selling merchandise that is used, damaged or discontinued, bowling alley, arcade, amusement center or video gallery, skating rink, adult book store, peep show, massage parlor, a so-called 'topless bar' or 'strip club', ballroom, dance hall or discotheque, funeral parlor, facility for the sale of paraphernalia for use with illicit drugs, off-track betting parlor, pet store, carnival, amusement park, fortune telling or circus, movie theater, new or used car dealership, gas station, auto repair shop, car wash (other than as an ancillary service provided in connection with the Parking Garage), any business whose product is sexual in nature, any medical, chemical or biological research and development facility or laboratory, any medical or counseling clinic that sees patients, or industrial, manufacturing or warehouse space.

B. Rentals. Residential Units may be rented or leased for the purposes set forth in the Master Deed for terms of not less than 1 year. The Commercial Units may be rented, leased or licensed to one or more tenants for a term of any length. All rentals, leases or licenses of units shall be subject to the provisions of the Master Deed, the By-Laws, and Rules and Regulation, and all tenants, occupants and licensees of units shall be obligated to observe all of the provisions of the Master Deed, the By-Laws and the Rules and Regulations and all applicable Legal Requirements. Any Residential Unit. Owner leasing a Residential Unit shall provided a copy of such lease to the Board. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the Declarant may rent, lease or license units, furnished or unfurnished, for any term.

C. Use of Parking Garage. No boats, trailers, recreational vehicles or commercial vehicles shall be permitted to enter into and/or park in the Parking Garage. Notwithstanding the foregoing sentence, commercial vehicles belonging to licensees, invitees, contractors, tenants or employees of any Commercial Unit Owner, the Declarant and the Board shall be permitted to park in the Parking Garage and, subject to the immediately following sentence, commercial vehicles that are cars, mini-vans and SUVs belonging to the Residential Unit Owners or their tenants shall be permitted to park in the Parking Garage. The Declarant (to the extent it has exercised the Public Parking Right), otherwise, the Board, reserves the right to regulate the Parking Garage and the types and sizes of vehicles that may be parked in the Parking Garage.

D. Exterior Features. The features of the condominium that are visible from the exterior of the building shall be preserved in their current condition without modification (except as may be modified by the Declarant), and to that end, no marquee, awning, screen, antenna, receiver, sign, banner or other decoration shall be placed upon or attached to any Residential Unit or any Residential Limited Common Element thereof, or the Condominium, including the interior surface of any exterior window, so as to be visible from the exterior of the Building (provided, however, that marquees, awnings, signs and standards may be attached to the Commercial Units and the portions of the Condominium adjacent thereto pursuant to Section 4.B(2) of the Master Deed). The exterior surface of the doors of Residential Units facing hallways or other interior or exterior Common Elements shall not be painted or otherwise decorated or modified. All draperies, window treatments and window coverings in any Residential Unit shall be lined with an off-white material or shall be off-white on the facing visible from the exterior of any Residential Unit, such that when dosed or drawn the appearance of the window from the exterior of the building, shall be off-white, and any columns in the Residential Units that are adjacent to windows, shall, at all times, be painted off-white such that the appearance of such columns from the exterior of the building shall be off-white. No solar films or other window treatment that is applied to the surface of the interior glass of any window belonging to a Residential Unit shall be permitted. No Residential Unit Owner shall enclose or screen-in any window or any balcony, terrace or roof terrace adjacent to its Residential Unit. The Board, may, but shall not be obligated to, permit Residential Unit Owners to install bug screens over operable windows, which shall be a uniform design chosen by the Board in its sole discretion.

E. Compliance with By-Laws. No unit shall be used or maintained in a manner inconsistent with the By-Laws and the Rules and Regulations, from time to time, adopted pursuant thereto.

F. Pets. The maintenance, keeping, boarding and/or raising of pets, shall be subject to the provisions of the Master Deed, By-Laws and the Rules and Regulations.

G. Use of Balconies, Terraces and Roof Terraces. The use of balconies, terraces and roof terraces shall be subject to the provisions of the Master Deed, the By-Laws and the Rules and Regulations.

H. Compliance with Legal Requirements. No unit or other portion of the condominium shall be used for any purpose prohibited by any applicable law, order, rule, regulation, permit or approval of any court, governmental entity or governmental agency of competent jurisdiction (hereinafter collectively referred to as 'Legal Requirements'). Compliance with all Legal Requirements shall be accomplished by and at the sole cost and expense of the Unit Owners. Each Unit Owner shall give prompt notice to the Board of any written notice it receives of any violation of any Legal Requirements affecting its Unit or Condominium.

I. Nuisance Uses. In keeping with the operation of Condominium, as a first-class facility, no Unit Owner shall cause or permit to exist in any portion of its Unit or the Condominium, any nuisance, offensive noises, odor or fumes, or any condition reasonably likely to prove hazardous to health or in violation of any Legal Requirements or Rules and Regulations.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, each Unit Owner hereby agrees, for itself, its successor and assigns, that no sale, lease, sublease or use of all or any portion of any other unit, for the uses permitted in the Master Deed (including, without limitation, the uses specifically referenced in Section 7.B and any uses accessory thereto) shall, if undertaken in a customary or reasonable manner, constitute a nuisance or otherwise be deemed to adversely affect such Unit Owner's use and enjoyment of its Unit or the Common Elements.

J. Benefit of Restrictions, Enforcement. The foregoing restrictions on the permitted uses of the Units shall be for the benefit of all Unit Owners and shall be enforceable solely by the Board. Said restrictions are intended to be perpetual, and to that end, may be extended by the Board, at such time or times and in such manner, as permitted or required by law for the continued enforceability thereof. No Unit Owner shall be liable for any breach of the provisions of Section 7 of the Master Deed, except such, as occur during such Unit Owner's time of ownership.

Aries Explore your talents. Sign up for a course that will help you develop a strategy to turn an enjoyable hobby into a profitable enterprise. Share your life's ambition with a loved one.

Taurus Make changes at home that will ease stress and make your life simpler. You'll be inspired to use the extra time you have to do something that brings you happiness.

Gemini Reneging on a promise will leave you in a precarious position. Have something ready to offer in place of your original plan to avoid damaging your reputation.

Cancer Don't let your impulses call the shots. If something doesn't seem right, keep a close watch and quietly protect against any sort of personal loss. Be patient.

Leo Look for alternate routes if you see too much negativity, baggage or debris in your way. Make subtle changes that you know are doable and are easy to implement without detection.

Virgo Take in as much information as possible. Get involved in events and discussions that will lead to introductions to people who can help you achieve your dream.

Libra Don't let an emotional situation keep you from doing something you want to do. Someone will try to manipulate you if you show confusion or insecurity. Put an end to being controlled.

Scorpio Take an inside look at what you are dealing with and who is behind any opposition. Go directly to the source and apply your magnetic personality to get approval.

Sagittarius You need to put yourself first. Make changes that will bring convenience and order to your life. Let go of dead weight and focus on what you can accomplish.

Capricorn Make sure you have everything in order. It will be difficult to deal with medical, emotional and joint financial matters if you have neglected personal business.

Aquarius Plan a day of fun with a friend, children or a loved one. Keeping active will help you stay in shape and boost your confidence. Romance is encouraged.

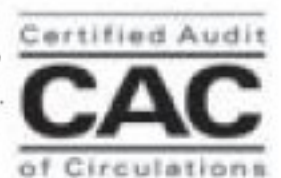

Pisces Do your research before you make a change that will affect your looks or income. An expert will offer you options that better suit your needs. EUGENIA LAST They'd read this: the STUDY OF BOLD results presented in this newspaper are true to a 95% statistical confidence. Markets surveyed include US, UK, Germany, Thailand, Japan, and Brazil. The survey was fielded online, conducted from August-September, 2015, in the six major markets. It had a sample size of 6000, with 1000 in each of the markets, with 50% LISTERINE® users (past 12 months) and 50% lapsed or non-users. Each group also had equal parts men and women with a wide distribution of ages. The STUDY OF BOLD is on-going, and we expect more data in future studies. That's bold.
